Mark Dallmeyer you are a true warrior. Thanks for persisting in the fight to get our court system to wise up and stop being party to family destruction.

Been there. Then 10 years later my "husband", in a disastrous relationship he began (maybe 2 or 3) years prior to leaving me, killed himself. He "murdered" the family by erasing it. Then he left everyone with the permanent devastation of suicide. And alienation among surviving members. Society values divorce as right and just. It is deadly.

Catholic Priests have no idea what it is like to be married an be a woman who gets pregnant, gives birth an raise children. Plus, they do errands, household chores an some have a job outside the home. They kiss their abusive husband's ass, no matter what the man does. I am an abandoned woman. It's against the law in Ohio. I am Catholic. I married a non Christian. The book I will write about my horror story will make a good movie. I have little respect for organized religions an also for an S&M God. An for a Holy Bible that has too many books removed from it. Take care.

May the rejected Holy Family give you the grace to sustain your promise. You are a hero.

There's no other way to describe it. It's murder in the first degree. Premeditation and collaboration with the Shepards that are supposed to be protecting us from the rabid wolves. An unmarked grave for marriages. Just snuff it out as if it never existed.

those who participated (especially the "priest") in this murder (of Holy Marriage ) will answer to Our Lord. Pray for their eternal souls that folded to temporal pleasures. Prayers, as well, for the the victims in this scheme. They are martyrs of a sort. Dear lady, you & your children have a great honor to bear such a cross. Your reward will be great & He will wipe away every tear.

Very sad, sad story. Sadly typical, too. May it motivate us to pray and sacrifice more for both the restoration of this lady's marriage & family, as well millions of others.

There are not words strong enough to describe the injustice imposed on you by the church.

This is heart-wrenchingly similar to most all other the stories of abandonment by both spouse and Church I have heard in nearly 3 decades. When will it stop? Having been abandoned by my Catholic wife 27 years ago, I am still in shock she actually carried it through. If priests and family members would have told her no it's not God's will and she is deeply hurting her child for life, she wouldn't have done it. Far no justification existed for our unnecessary divorce. How sad for all of us! All I can count on now is that the horrendous suffering helps me realize my purpose on this earth, to know, love and serve the Lord my God with gladness! For the rest of my days, I will work on changing the training priests, deacons, lay counselors, parents and other laity get so they will learn to truly minister to the unhappily married well, as the Lord permits me to.

I've seen this movie before. The re-writing of history especially. Fortunately, my wife got NO help from our pastor. When she first filed, he asked to see us both. He was kind but firm. He refused to validate her emotional grievances as a justification for divorce. So, she ended up leaving the Church, as well as our marriage. It's a sad situation. She has an apartment with 2 cats, the kids 3 days of the week, and her revisionist history. I understand the anxiety, too. Whenever I hear a cell phone with the same ringtone as my wife, my gut tightens up. It reminds me of the past few years of acrimony before she left, the marathon phone calls she had with her toxic friends. When one of her "friends" heard she was having marriage problems, she gave my wife a notorious book titled "Uncoupling". What a sick thing to do! That's like giving a book on assisted suicide to a friend with cancer! Anyway, the world is a dark place, and getting darker by the day, but Christ is with us!
