

to be a sign of the bond without the existence of the love; but it is not possible to be a sign of the love of Christ in a marriage if one is not at the same time a sign of the bond which unites Christ to his Church. This is the avenue canon law has taken in determining that it is consent, rather than love, that makes marriage; even if the bonum conjugum has emerged of late as one of the ends of marriage.

Canon law has been blamed many times for the difficulties encountered by married people, including Catholics who have divorced and remarried civilly or otherwise. Such reproaches cannot be extended to canonists themselves, unless it be that they try too hard to regulate, on a juridical level, situations whose resolution could at times be better sought on a theological or pastoral level. To what extent have we not been responsible in this way, for delays to offer real solutions to the problems of those who have experienced the breakdown of their marriage? I mean that we must not forget that marriage, once again, is not only the sacrament of bond but also the sacrament of love. And then, the problem and its solution might be of a theological nature, without forgetting that the juridical dimension would have to be taken into account at one stage or another since it is this dimension which is the basis of the contract.

Speaking of the theological dimension of marriage, we should not forget a theological solution. I am reminded of the solution used by a number of Orthodox Churches and already mentioned by Pope Francis. It should lead us to consider a question: did the Church stretch to its limit the power to forgive, a power which was handed over to her by Christ? We possess a good spirituality of forgiveness, but do we possess an equally good theology of forgiveness? Would it not be possible to grant pardon to those members of the faithful who made a mistake in marrying or in entering a sacramental marriage? Or to those guilty of a grave offense against their commitment to be a sign in the community of the love of Christ for His Church?

My fear is that the present Synod has created too high expectations. My hope is simply that the Synodal Fathers will face the true questions and accordingly examine the true, possible solutions.

Thank you very much for your kindness.

U.S. TRIBUNAL STATISTICS 2013

Since 1975, the CLSA has published Tribunal Statistics annually in Proceedings. These statistics are provided voluntarily by participating tribunal offices in the United States. This year's statistical report was compiled by means similar to last year's report. Tribunals were asked to submit a copy of the report sent annually to the Apostolic Signatura, as well as some basic financial information. Submissions came by mail to the Office of the Executive Coordinator or by on-line entry via clsa.org. This change, implemented three years ago, has resulted in a more accurate comparison of statistics among U.S. tribunals.

Participation in the survey increased in comparison to last year. This year, the CLSA received information from 165 tribunals, compared to 163 last year. Included again in this year's report is the number of decisions found contrary to nullity from each reporting tribunal, with the percentage of negative decisions out of the total calculated. Following the same gradual trend as indicated in the past several years, the number of cases introduced and decisions made in American tribunals continues to decline, while expenses continue to rise.

The tribunals of the Archdioceses of Baltimore, Galveston-Houston, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Santa Fe; and the Dioceses of Amarillo, Arlington, Burlington, Covington, Fort Worth, Helena, Juneau, Kalamazoo, Las Vegas, Pittsburgh, Winona, the Eparchy of St. Maron of Brooklyn, The Archeparchy for Ukrainians in Pittsburgh, the Ukrainian Diocese of St. Josaphat in Parma and the Holy Protection of Mary, Byzantine Catholic Eparchy of Phoenix did not participate in the survey.
